

GAIN AND LOSS

Caribbean Sugar Will Be Costly to the States.

DUTY SOON TO BE DROPPED

Views of a Firm in Hamburg—Cuba and the Trust—Lombard's Men to Suffer.

The fact that the close relations which will exist in future between Cuba and the United States will have a marked effect upon the production of sugar throughout the world, is keenly appreciated on the European Continent, as indicated by reports which are reaching the State Department. It is generally feared that the policy already enforced by the United States, in shutting out beet-root sugar by tariff legislation, will be given a firmer basis in the future by the immense supply of cane sugar which will be available from Cuba and Porto Rico. An important Hamburg firm (Alexander John & Co.) issued a circular in August which is attracting much attention in economic and business circles on the continent. This statement makes the following review of the situation from the standpoint of the interests of the bounty-paying countries:

"Whether the island is officially annexed or not is unimportant as to the economic relations. The first act which McKinley executed after the surrender of Santiago was to introduce the American customs tariff. From this it follows that later, with the conclusion of peace, the same will be applied to the whole island. The logical consequence of the application of the American customs tariff is the free import of Cuban products into the United States. So then the American manufacturers and sugar trust have their will, and the advantages which will result will soon cover the cost which the filibustering equipment and war-baiting is supposed to have cost them. Havemeyer, the head of the American Sugar Trust, possesses already extensive estates in Cuba, and, as through the insurrection and the war, the need of money has not grown less in Cuba, it will not be difficult to acquire still further greater possessions there.

"America has a demand for sugar of two millions of tons, of which Louisiana supplies 200,000 tons, while 100,000 tons come from beet, sorghum, maple and other domestic sugar productions. Before the last revolution, the Cuban sugar production amounted to over one million tons, in well-informed American sugar circles they are convinced that Cuba will cover the entire sugar demand for America in the course of two or three years. This means for the American nation in the first place the yearly deficiency of a round $45,000,000, which the duty on imported sugar has hitherto produced. It means at the same time the destruction of the sugar production of Louisiana, which cannot exist without the protection of the duty. The sugar cane can stand no frost; in Cuba there is no frost, but in Louisiana the sugar cane is visited with frost from time to time. We calculate Louisiana sugar to be worth only $80 a ton, so that the omission of the Louisiana production represents a yearly loss of $20,000,000. First of all the planters of Cuba and the sugar trust will make a booming business. Both, so far as they have not already formed a personal union, will share among themselves the profit which will arise when the Cuban sugar has no duty to pay and is made cheaper for America than the sugar of other countries. In addition to this, cane sugar is worth already one mark more than beet sugar.

"In the measure in which Cuba supplies the demand for America, America ceases to be a customer of other cane sugar and beet sugar. Of the last it has imported 300,000 tons; the rest of the import was cane sugar. When America ceases to be a buyer of cane sugar, the English market, which has hitherto been the chief customer for beet sugar, remains for cane sugar. England has during the last year consumed over 2,500,000 tons of sugar, of which about 300,000 came from Cuba and Porto Rico. As far as America ceases to be a customer, the whole English sugar demand can be supplied with cane sugar. Then Europe sits with her export premiums, and can realize nothing from them. It is expected already that by the next harvest the changed circumstances of Cuba will count for much, as sufficient cane sugar stands in the field to supply 500,000 tons, about double as much as last harvest supplied."
